Time to Suit Up

Farewell pandemic sweatpants—suiting is back. For fall, designers sampled styles from decades past to create these nostalgic yet modern looks.

By Sahar Khan

1 FINE AND DANDY
The designers behind Ernest W. Baker thought of a “well-put-together Milanese man from the ‘60s” for their fall collection. The result? Sharp tailoring, pinstripes, and a diagonally striped jacquard vest accessorized with a beetle-shaped broach. Jacket, $870; pants, $595; tie, $100; ssense.com

2 WORKING 9 TO COCKTAIL HOUR
Kenzo channels 1950s workwear with long lines, baggy tailoring, and a narrow tie. The pink-and-brown tartan sums up the postwar penchant for patterns; it’ll make you stand out from the crowd at after-work drinks. Jacket, $1,125; pants, $555; tie, $170; kenzo.com

3 THE NEW POWER DRESSING
Although the “greed is good” ethos of the ‘80s is frowned upon nowadays, this fall Fendi is celebrating the era’s hyper-masculine, boxy suits—albeit with a twist. The Italian brand embraces tradition with a black-and-white check and airy silhouette but pokes at gender stereotypes with a matching purse and Mary Janes. Jacket, $2,650; pants, $850; fendi.com

4 FEELIN’ GROOVY
A leisure suit in brown corduroy, a metallic knit sweater, and yellow-tinted frames: 1970s fashion is far out at Gucci this season. A silk headscarf (the Adidas trefoil is an homage to the companies’ fruitful collaboration) completes the look with appropriately slouchy Me Decade aplomb. Jacket, $3,600; pants, $1,100; waistcoat, $1,380; shirt, $750; gucci.com

5 IN THE PINK
Alexander McQueen dips a wool-and-mohair blend in barely perceptible pink that would befit a gospel preacher or a South Beach tech investor. While the wide lapels and neat shoulders typify a ‘90s look, the tonal fabrics and just-right tailoring exemplify contemporary construction. Jacket, $3,240; pants, $960; alexandermcqueen.com
